

As this year's summer project, young artists learned how to create Inner-City Threads, sketching their ideas and then stitching them together.

IN TRUE ya/ya FASHION

Glenn Garrison Jr. and other young artists learned the creative and technical sides of fashion.

STAFF PHOTOS BY YA/YA artists M left, and Glenn consult as they first created for the gr
Threads fashion

'THE FINAL FIT'

What: A fashion show featuring designs by Young Aspirations/Young Artists.
When: Saturday, 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.
Where: The Ogden Museum of Southern Art, 925 Canal Street
Admission: Free, as part of Art for Art's Sake

By Siona LaFrance
Staff writer

At first glance, a workspace outfitted with sewing machines, bits of fabric and clothing sketches seems an unlikely place to find a band of Young Artists.

But members of Young Aspirations/Young Artists, the local group famed for its colorful painted chairs, became quite comfortable over the summer with the tools of the fashion trade.

Immersed in a project called Inner-City Threads and guided by professionals in fashion design and apparel manufacturing, 15 young artists learned the